

ABSTRACT

The role of Supporter's Masculinity and Fanaticism The Toward Domestic Violence (Research based on The Jakmania Supporter). (Bonar Hutapea, M. Si). Bachelor degree in psychology, Tarumanagara University, (i-x, 47 pages, R1-R5, Appdx 1-34)

In Indonesia, the domestic violence research has never been found in football supporter context, but at the countries outside Indonesia, that thing happened several times and obtained a correlation between domestic violence and supporters. Domestic violence it self is a continuous behavior and an inflicted negative effect. This research aims to know the role of supporter's masculinity and fanaticism toward the domestic violence. The research population was the supporter of Persatuan Sepakbola Jakarta, The Jakmania, with 196 people as the sample. The sampling method was using accidental technique sampling. The measurement instruments that usedin this research was using Wolman fanaticism, Male Role Norms Inventory – Short Form (MRNI - SF), and the domestic violence has analyzed by multiple regression analysis technique. The analysis result shown the rule of supporter's masculinity and fanaticism toward the domestic violence ($R^2=0.541$ and $p=0.000<0.05$), which explaining the number of supporter's masculinity and fanaticism effect was about 54.1% and has influenced by other factor for the rest of it. This research result expected to be useful in the Social Psychology and Sports Psychology.

Keywords: Masculinity, Supporters Fanaticism, Domestic Violence