

ABSTRACT

Erik Wijaya

Effect of Sensation Seeking Encouragement from peers, Parenting Parents, Religious Values and Juvenile Delinquency in middle adolescent of high school. (Dr. Fransisca Iriani R. D, M.Si and Riana Sahrani, M.Si., Psi). Master of Psychology, University of Tarumanagara (99 pages, P1-P8).

This study wanted to see the influence of sensation seeking encouragement, parenting parent and religion value education on juvenile delinquency. The urge sensation seeking is a person's tendency to seek diversity, something new. Parents parenting is parenting that done by parents to their children. Religion value education is a process of transferring a set of moral values and norms that serve to guide spiritual spiritual life and human life both as individuals and as communities. While juvenile delinquency is behavior of breaking social, legal, and religion norms which is conducted by people under age 18 years. The research was conducted on 222 middle adolescents (ages 15-18 years) who attended the two vocational school that has a tendency to behave delinquent. The results of the regression test there was a significant effect ( $R^2 = 0.220$  or 22%) of sensation seeking encouragement, parenting parent and religion value education on juvenile delinquency.

Keywords: sensation seeking, parenting parent, religion value education, juvenile delinquency, middle adolescence.