The purpose of this research is to describe meaning of life on the offender attempted suicides of young adult women. This research was conducted using qualitative method and open interviews, with three subjects aged 21-25 years. Based on Frankl's theory, saying that those who had had a meaningful life orientation, but then lost the meaning of it due to the loss of confidence or find that the meaning of a disappointment. If the desire for meaning is not met then the individual will feel meaningless and desperate to even think about suicide. This research found that the three subjects who attempted suicide suffering caused to lose the meaning of life so choose to end life. It was found that the first subjects lost the meaning of life because the subject loses his girlfriend while the second and third meaning of life lost due to a breakup with her boyfriend.
