Comments to the Author

The article compares judicial roles in international arbitration in Indonesia and China across three stages: before the arbitration (separability and competence-competence), during the proceedings (evidence and interim measures), and after the award (enforcement/annulment/public policy). The overall thesis that both systems trend pro-arbitration while retaining distinct modes of supervision is valuable. The manuscript reads clearly and is well-signposted.

The national arbitration statute is the Arbitration Law of the PRC 1994 (as amended). Please remove “2017 Arbitration Law” from Table 1 and throughout. State unequivocally the status of any 2023–2025 revision (draft, promulgated, in force), with the promulgation date and authoritative text if applicable.

Anchor your discussions to article numbers: separability (Art 19 CAL), competence-competence and court/commission contest (Art 20 CAL), set-aside domestic awards (Art 58 CAL), refusal/enforcement and court review provisions in the Civil Procedure Law for foreign-related and foreign awards (e.g., CPL arts commonly cited for recognition/enforcement and set-aside of foreign-related awards).

When you characterise China’s “court-first” approach, please add the SPC prior-reporting mechanism for non-enforcement and set-aside of foreign-related and foreign awards and cite the SPC notices/interpretations by name and date. This is central to the pro-enforcement trend.

ndonesia. Make explicit the New York Convention reservations (reciprocity and “commercial” reservations upon accession by Presidential Decree No. 34/1981) and tie them to IAL Art 66 conditions. Clarify that the IAL does not enumerate NYC Art V(1)–(2) grounds but that courts apply a combination of IAL conditions and public policy review; support this with at least one Supreme Court case or Perma application example. For annulment, set out Art 70 IAL grounds verbatim (forgery, concealed decisive documents, fraud) and add Constitutional Court Decision No. 15/PUU-XII/2014, which struck down the Elucidation’s pre-proof requirement; explain the procedural consequence.

China. Separate clearly: domestic awards (broader review including some substantive defects under CAL Art 58) versus foreign-related and foreign awards (recognition/enforcement typically mirrors procedural grounds akin to NYC Art V(1), with public interest as a narrow refusal basis). Add two SPC Guiding Cases or typical intermediate-court decisions to illustrate the narrow reading of “public interest,” and make plain that breach of a mandatory rule is not automatically a public-policy breach.

Table 1, “Arbitration Law”: replace “2017 Arbitration Law” with “Arbitration Law of the PRC 1994 (as amended)”, and add a footnote clarifying the status of any 2024 amendment or draft.

Table 1, “Jurisdiction (competence-competence)”: for Indonesia, add “No express statutory competence-competence; courts have accepted jurisdiction in some cases notwithstanding an arbitration clause (citations)” to avoid over-generalisation.

Table 2, “Annulment (China)”: distinguish domestic versus foreign-related awards and align grounds with CAL and CPL provisions cited in the text.

Comments to the Author

Please try to include any case law from Indonesia or China to prove that the legislative weakness on competence-competence is also significant in practice. Please add any statistics on annulment or non-enforcement of arbitral awards, so it becomes more clear what is the impact of the legislation in practice.

Reviewer: 3

Comments to the Author

Title: Consider refining the title to reflect the nuanced comparative and doctrinal focus. I suggest: "Judicial Gatekeeping in International Arbitration: Divergent Paths Toward Convergence in Indonesia and China".

Methodology: Clarify the Comparative Framework: The article mentions a "comparative legal methodology" but does not specify the criteria used for comparison. Consider adding a short paragraph explaining the basis for selecting Indonesia and China and the analytical framework (e.g., doctrinal, institutional, procedural dimensions).

Subheadings: Use more descriptive subheadings to guide the reader (e.g., instead of "Roles Before Arbitral Proceedings," use "Judicial Influence on Arbitration Agreements and Jurisdiction"). Consider revising other subheadings accordingly.

Tables: Tables 1 and 2 are helpful but could be expanded with citations or footnotes to support each point.

Depth of Analysis:

Recent Developments: Include more recent case law or legislative updates, especially regarding China's 2024 arbitration law amendment.

Public Policy Discussion: The section on public policy in Indonesia is insightful but could benefit from a comparative doctrinal analysis with China's narrower interpretation. Consider referencing international standards or UNCITRAL guidance.

Competence-Competence Principle: The discussion could be enriched by exploring how the lack of clarity in Indonesia affects arbitral autonomy and comparing it with jurisdictions that fully embrace the principle.

Legal and Policy Implications:

Reform Recommendations: The conclusion hints at future reforms in Indonesia. Consider elaborating on specific legislative or judicial reforms that could align Indonesia more closely with international best practices.

Investor Confidence: Discuss how judicial attitudes toward arbitration affect foreign investment and cross-border commercial relations.

Language and Style:

Consistency: Ensure consistent use of terms (e.g., "competence-competence" vs. "Kompetenz-Kompetenz").

Grammar and Syntax: Minor grammatical refinements would improve readability, especially in longer sentences.

Dear Dr. Heng Choon Chan,

I am writing to inform you that we have completed the revisions requested by the three reviewers.

The updated manuscript has been successfully uploaded to my author dashboard. For your convenience, we have highlighted the revisions in red to enhance readability.

We have carefully considered the reviewers' comments and have implemented the following recommendations:

1. Remove references to the "2017 Arbitration Law" and clearly state the status of revisions to the Chinese Arbitration Law (CAL) from 2023 to 2025.
2. Provide legislative updates, particularly regarding the anticipated amendments to the 2024 arbitration law in China.
3. Enhance the methodology by detailing the criteria and rationale for selecting Indonesia and China as focus countries.
4. Agree on title refinement as suggested by Reviewer 3, including revisions to the subheadings.
5. Discuss further the principle of competence-competence by incorporating relevant case examples from both Indonesia and China.
6. Connect the New York Convention reservations (specifically reciprocity and the "commercial" reservations established by Presidential Decree No. 34/1981) with Article 66 of the Indonesian Arbitration Law (IAL).
7. Include statistics pertaining to the annulment and non-enforcement of arbitral awards from China's perspective, sourced from the Supreme People's Court (SPC) (with a link in Chinese), while there is no official statistics available for Indonesia.
8. Clarify that the IAL does not enumerate the grounds outlined in Articles V(1) and (2) of the New York Convention; making it less extensive than enforcement under the NYC.
9. Explain the procedural consequences concerning the grounds for annulment specified in Article 70 of the IAL, as well as the implications of Constitutional Court Decision No. 15/PUU-XII/2014, which invalidated the pre-proof requirement.
10. In conclusion, highlight the necessity for specific legislative or judicial reforms to align Indonesia more closely with best practices observed in China.

Please let us know if there are any reviewers' recommendations we may have overlooked or if further revisions are needed.

We would greatly appreciate an immediate decision regarding the manuscript. Thank you very much for your kind attention and guidance on this matter.

Warm regards,
Gatot
